Committee of the Whole

January 24, 2000

This meeting was held immediately following the regular board meeting with three (3) legislators absent. (Absent: Burdick, Saylor, Walchli)

Discussion was held on three proposals by the State of New York Department of Public Service, to implement a new area code. (Copies attached). Due to the increased demand for new telephone numbers by consumers, caused by the heavy use of fax machines, cellular phones, modems and pagers, and demand for new numbers by competing carriers, the 716 area code is running out of telephone numbers.

It was the consensus of the Committee of the Whole, that a letter be sent to the Public Service Commission, recommending the implementation of Alternative #3, which will divide 716 into three (3) smaller area code groups. It was felt that this option offers the best long term solution to the problem.

There being no further business to discuss, the meeting was adjourned.

Dear Western New York Consumer Leader:

Due to the increased demand for new telephone numbers by consumers - caused by the heavy use of fax machines, cellular phones, modems and pagers, and demand for new numbers by competing carriers - the 716 area code is running out of telephone numbers. Other regions of the State, as well as communities around the country, have been faced with similar situations. Therefore, the New York State Public Service Commission (PSC) has initiated a proceeding to determine the best way to ensure a continuous supply of telephone numbers in the Western New York region with the fewest disruptions.

Staff of the Department of Public Service has proposed three options to implement a new area code, and they are discussed in the enclosed material: "Western New York Area Code Proceeding - Case 99-C-0800." This fact sheet summarizes the options and includes the different ways for consumers to comment about the issue. Also enclosed is a map of the region and maps showing the two geographic splits proposed by Staff. We would appreciate your help in sharing this information with the people you serve

The PSC has several ways for people to comment about this issue - commenting via our Website, leaving a message on our toll-free Opinion Line (1-800-335-2120), sending written comments or speaking at public statement hearings. Informational sessions will be held prior to each of the public statement hearings for people to learn more about the issue and the options. The schedule is included in the enclosed material. All comments must be received by Tuesday, February 1, 2000 and will be considered by the PSC when it makes its decision about implementing a new area code. A decision is expected to be made in the spring.

Thank you for your assistance in helping us to provide important information to New Yorkers. If you have any questions, or need additional copies of this material, please call either Ms. Nancy Tourville at (212) 290-4314 or Ms. Ginger Stimson at (716) 847-3259.

NEW YORK STATE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION

- Western New York Region Area Code Proceeding - Case 99-C-0800

Since the early 1950s, the Western New York region of New York State has had one area code - 716. However, with the increased usage of fax machines, cellular phones, modems and pagers, the 716 area code is running out of assignable telephone numbers. In addition, competition in local telephone service has resulted in the assignment of many numbers to new local telephone companies. As a result, another area code is needed.

The Issue to be Decided

The central issue to be decided by the New York State Public Service Commission (PSC) is: what is the best option for implementing a new area code in Western New York? The PSC staff has put forth three recommendations for consideration. A decision is expected to be made by the PSC in the spring of 2000. Approximately one year later, the new area code must be used to complete calls. This time period allows for the telephone companies to make all necessary network changes and to educate people about new dialing patterns.

The Options

The three options currently under consideration are an overlay plan and two geographic splits.

Overlay Plan

- ☞ A new area code would be added to 716 and would be superimposed over the entire region.
- ☞ All existing customers would retain their 716 area code and seven-digit telephone number(s).
- ☞ New telephone numbers would be assigned either 716 or the new area code, depending upon availability.

Advantages

- The overlay would avoid a forced area code change for existing telephone customers in the 716 area code.
- The overlay can easily be replicated in the future, as needed.
- It would spare thousands of wireless customers from having their cellular phones and pagers reprogrammed.

Disadvantages

- The overlay could require 1+10-digit dialing for all calls, even calls within the same area code (intra-code calls), although these calls would be billed as local calls.
- It might cause confusion since area codes would always have to be dialed. This would apply to calls within a residence or business located in the same building.
- Dialing additional numbers could cause problems for people with special needs, including the elderly.

Geographic Splits

- ☞ The Western New York region would be split into either two or three geographic sections, along county lines.
- ☞ One section would retain 716 as its area code, and the other section(s) would be assigned the new area code(s).
- ☞ All existing customers would retain their seven-digit telephone number.

Advantages

- The geographic split retains the familiar identification between a locale and an area code, thereby avoiding the confusion of having more than one area code within the same neighborhood or business district.
- People would continue to dial seven digits within their home area code.

Disadvantages

- If there is a two-way split, approximately 1.2 million existing residential customers plus numerous businesses in Western New York would be required to adopt a new area code. If there is a three-way split, approximately 1.4 million existing residential customers plus numerous businesses would be required to adopt the new area codes.
- Thousands of wireless customers located within the new area code(s) might be required to have their cellular phones and pagers reprogrammed.
- Future area code relief could require additional splits to smaller and smaller regions without clear recognizable geographic boundaries, and could mean that some customers would face multiple number changes.

Other Critical Issues

- As part of its consideration of a geographic split option, the PSC will decide which region(s) should keep the 716 area code and which region(s) should get the new area code. Your input on this issue is important and will be considered carefully by the PSC.
- Presently, in an overlay situation, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) regulations require 1+10-digit dialing on every call, even on calls within the same area code. The PSC has asked the FCC to reconsider this requirement.
- A new area code will not change rates for local calls.

Guidelines To Be Met

Under a geographic split, the new regions must have both a similar period of relief before another area code would be needed and a reasonable balance in population. Area codes cannot be technology-specific; for example, an area code cannot be assigned to only cellular phones and fax machines, or only to businesses.

Number Conservation Measures

The FCC recently granted the PSC's request to implement number conservation measures designed to optimize the use of remaining telephone numbers in an area code. The measures include:

- allocating telephone numbers in blocks of 1,000 rather than the current practice of 10,000,
- establishing a number pool by reclaiming unused and reserved blocks of 10,000 numbers,
- establishing number allocation standards, and
- auditing carriers' usage of phone numbers.

While these measures may delay the need for a new area code, the PSC is still required by the FCC to have a plan in place for area code relief. Therefore, the PSC will decide which area code option should be adopted; however, depending upon the effectiveness of the conservation measures, implementation plans may be put on hold.
